FRSEMR 62J Harvard’s Greatest Hits: The Most Important, Rarest, and Most Valuable Books in Houghton Library

Class Number: 19456 Course ID: 207807
Fall 2018
David Stern
Th 3:00pm-5:45pm

Have you ever fantasized of turning the pages of a Gutenberg Bible with your own fingers? Or a medieval illustrated Book of Hours? Or touching a papyrus fragment of Homer? Or a First Folio edition of Shakespeare? Or seeing close-up Copernicus’ diagram of the heliocentric universe? The Houghton Library of Harvard University is one of the world’s greatest repositories of ancient scrolls, papyrus codices, illuminated manuscripts on parchment and paper, early printed books, rare books published since the sixteenth century down until today, and stunning prints and other types of graphic art. In this freshman seminar, we will utilize Houghton’s extraordinary holdings to study first-hand the history of the book in the West as a material artifact from its beginnings in the ancient Near East down to the present day. Each week we will focus upon a cluster of books. Before class, students will be asked to examine selected books in Houghton’s...
Reading Room as well as online. During class-time, we will study the books again as a group. Visiting experts will demonstrate how to unroll a papyrus codex, the technology involved in creating a codex and printing on a hand-pulled press, and the techniques modern conservators use to preserve manuscripts and books. You will emerge from this seminar with a heightened understanding of what a rich thing a book is, and so much more than just a text. And you will have seen and studied close-up some of the most visually spectacular and culturally significant books in all Western history.

ANE 209 Biographies in the Hebrew Bible

Class Number: 18905 Course ID: 207757

Fall 2018

Yair Zakovitch

Th 9:00am-11:45am

The Hebrew Bible’s historiography is designed as a series of life stories. From Abraham to Isaac, from Jacob to Joseph, Moses, Joshua and on to the judges, prophets, and kings, this is a long-distance relay race in which the baton is being passed from one character to his successor, from the beginning of history till the expulsion of Israel from its Land. Some of these life stories, like Moses’s, are rather complete, starting with pre-birth traditions and ending with death; others, such as Joshua, are only partial. In this course, we will conduct a close reading of some of the Bible’s biographies, noting and explaining the relationships, similarities and differences between them. Since we deal with religious literature, special attention will also be given to each character’s relationship with God and its significance. All the while, we will question the biblical writers, their motivations, who they were supporting and who they were criticizing, what their ideological motivations were, and noticing and enjoying their literary techniques.

Finally, we will also be looking at how some biographies came to be retold in Second Temple Period literature as well as rabbinic literature, and question the varying motives, literary tastes and modes of interpretation of the different eras and socio-political contexts.

Class Notes: The instructor for this course is Professor Yair Zakovitch, Weinstock Visiting Professor of Jewish Studies (Fall 2018).

HEBREW 204 Reading the Song of Songs

Class Number: 18903 Course ID: 207756

Fall 2018

Yair Zakovitch

W 9:00am-11:45am

The Song of Songs, a collection of secular and often erotic poems, is a riddle within the anthology of sacred literature we know as the Hebrew Bible. Its poems describe various encounters between the young woman and her lover and several of her dreams, include both dialogues and monologues, riddles and wasfs (a poetic genre of poems describing the human body), and many seem to portray the world and viewpoints of the young woman—a rarity in the very male-oriented literature of the Bible.

Over the course of the semester, we will do a close reading of many of these poems. We will learn about the different genres and the poems’ relationships with other parts of the Bible—wisdom, prophecy, and narrative—as well as with the literature of the Ancient Near East. We will question the redactive process that formed the collection, its attribution to Solomon and his portrayal in the book’s poems and, towards the end, we will reach conclusions about the book’s origins, language, dating and, finally, the book’s allegorization and canonization.

Course Notes: Intermediate Hebrew reading proficiency is recommended.

Class Notes: The instructor for this course is Professor Yair Zakovitch, Weinstock Visiting Professor of Jewish Studies (Fall 2018).

HEBREW 159 STUDIES IN THE BABYLONIAN TALMUD: PARENTS AND CHILDREN
Class Number: 19392 Course ID: 207795
Fall 2018
Shaye J.D. Cohen and Miriam Simma-Walfish
Th 3:00pm-5:45pm

What obligations do children have to their parents? Parents to their children? In this course, we will study legal and narrative passages about these questions, which will provide a window into rabbinic thinking about how the parent-child relationship fits into an ideal way of communicating values and maintaining a culture. This course will also serve as a methodological introduction to the academic study of the Babylonian Talmud. Secondary readings will be primarily focused on academic tools such as source criticism, social history, critical gender studies, and literary theory, as scholars have applied these tools to the Babylonian Talmud. We will also explore how traditional commentators can help raise critical questions about the
COMPLIT 211 MYSTICISM AND LITERATURE
Class Number: 19526 Course ID: 114368
Fall 2018
Luis Giron Negron
M 3:00pm-5:45pm

Examines trends, issues and debates in the comparative study of mystical literature. Close readings of primary works by Jewish, Christian and Muslim authors from the Middle Ages through the 16th century. Premodern authors include Saint John of the Cross, Saint Theresa of Ávila, Mechtild of Magdeburg, Hadewijch, Pseudo-Dionysius, Dante Alighieri, Bernard of Clairvaux, Margery Kempe, Bahya ibn Paquda, Solomon ibn Gabirol, Yehudah Halevi, Moses de León (Sefer ha-Zohar), Maulana Rumi, al-Hallaj, Ibn Farid, Ibn al-‘Arabi, and Fariduddin Attar. Topics include poetry and mysticism; allegory, symbolism and Scripture; body and gender; apophasis vs cataphasis; exemplarity and autobiographism; language and experience. COMPLIT 107 THE POLITICS OF YIDDISH
Class Number: 19535 Course ID: 207574
Fall 2018
Saul Zaritt
W 12:00pm-2:00pm

A bastardized German, a jargon, a woman’s vernacular, an old world language, a dying and ghostly tongue, a Hasidic language, a queer language, a radical language—these are just a few of the ways that Yiddish has been labeled over its one-thousand-year history. This course will trace the shifting politics attached to Yiddish from its early modern beginnings as a language of translation between Jewish and non-Jewish cultures to its postwar vacillation between a language of mourning and nostalgia, Jewish American humor, Hasidic isolation, and contemporary Jewish radicalism. Through poetry, fiction, essay, and film, we will discuss what it might mean to discover “the secret language of the Jews” at the origins of Jewish socialism and at the foundations of diaspora nationalism. All texts will be read in translation.
Jointly Offered with: Faculty of Arts & Sciences as YIDDISH 107.
COMPLIT 179 GHOSTWRITERS AND VENTRiloQUISTS: POSTwar JEWISH AMERICAN CULTuRE

Class Number: 19534 Course ID: 203082
Fall 2018
Saul Zaritt
F 12:00pm-2:00pm

This course takes ideas of the “ghostwriter” and the “ventriloquist” as a lens through which to read postwar Jewish American culture. In the wake of the Holocaust, Jewish American writers and cultural producers began to feel a responsibility to a lost civilization that seemed to haunt their every creative act. Even as they achieved worldwide fame, these artists felt both burdened and inspired by old world ghosts. Often the very success of a given work was attributed to the ways in which it reanimated and revowed ghosts in order to alternately dazzle and comfort audiences. This course asks: How do strategies of ghostwriting and ventriloquy compensate for trauma and loss? In what ways do such reenactments modify an original text? Through analysis of postwar texts and films in English and Yiddish (in translation), this course studies how specters of the past function both as arbiters of cultural value and as reminders of the discontinuities and traumas of the Jewish American present. Films include Tevya, Fiddler on the Roof, The Diary of Anne Frank, and the TV series Transparent. We will read texts by Sholem Aleichem, Isaac Bashevis Singer, Philip Roth, Cynthia Ozick, Grace Paley, and others.

Class Notes: This course meets 12-2pm
Jointly Offered with: Faculty of Arts & Sciences as JEWISHST 179.

Class Number: 19595 Course ID: 207866
Fall 2018
Tally Amir
T 12:00pm-2:00pm

“Human rights” has become a ubiquitous concept around the world. It is used to justify, legitimize, and critique policies, practices, and laws. Despite the evolution of “human rights” over the last half-century in both international and domestic law, the content and impact of the concept remains unclear. This seminar will address key issues in contemporary human rights theory and practice through a comparison of Israel and the United States. Seminar participants will first study the philosophical and political processes that led to codification of human rights in both countries. We will then take a closer look at some of the main human rights controversies, including desegregation of education, freedom of religion, housing equality, extraterritorial application of human rights, and employment rights. Readings for the course include Court decisions, International Law instruments, Domestic legislation and socio-legal articles, as well as sociological analyses.

ANE 103 ANCIENT LIVES

Class Number: 15331 Course ID: 110014
Fall 2018
Gojko Barjamovic
TTh 12:00pm-1:15pm

What are the essential elements of human society? Have our fundamental conditions developed, and how? Can we use themes from ancient history to think about contemporary society and culture? These questions are in focus in this course on ‘Ancient Lives’, which explores the earliest human civilizations in the region commonly known as Mesopotamia (c. 3000-300 BCE) in what is now Iraq, Iran, Syria and Turkey. Few elements in the way we live and organize ourselves today are to be taken for granted. There is, and has always been, a wealth of ways in which humans live. But biologically we are the same as our ancestors of 5000 years ago, at the dawn of history. Any likeness or difference between ‘us and them’ is therefore likely to be a product of history and culture. ‘Ancient Lives’ builds upon this realization to inspire a critical way of thinking about society in the broadest possible scope. Areas explored during the course are selected for their relevance across the range of contemporary life - they include freedom, music, public health, food, jurisprudence, trade, the visual arts, science, sexuality, religion and political power. You learn about how societies and individuals have dealt with change on multiple levels, from large-scale societal revolutions to personal transformation. Having taken this course, you will have gained a fundamental understanding and appreciation of human life in the broadest scope, as well as of your own life as a part of history. You will be able to critically assess contemporary discourses on the study of ‘the other’ in past and present; engage with core concepts of human society, such as justice, beauty, value and belief on a broad historical base; be familiar with examples of classical social theory and thinkers through concrete cases in which their work has been applied to or shaped by the study of the past; and acquire skills in presenting scholarly work to a general audience.

What is the power of a story? For several thousand years Adam and Eve were the protagonists in the central origin myth of the Jewish, Christian, and Muslim worlds. That myth was the arena for ethical reasoning about transgression and innocence, sexuality, gender roles, labor, suffering, and death. Jointly taught by History of Art and Architecture and English, our course focuses on this enigmatic story and its spectacular elaborations in theology, philosophy, literature and art. Above all, looking closely at some of the greatest achievements of European art and literature—from Dürer, Michelangelo and Rembrandt to Milton’s Paradise Lost—we will compare the possibilities of the verbal and visual arts in portraying human existence.

Class Number: 20238 Course ID: 208115

Fall 2018

Giovanni Bazzana

Th 3:00pm-5:00pm

This course will focus on the role played by spirit possession and exorcism in the religious experience and cultural trajectories of the early Christ group. Texts related to these two themes will be contextualized within the Second Temple Jewish and broader Mediterranean religious and cultural environments that witnessed the beginnings and the spread of the movement. Particular attention will be paid to the need to understand possession as a productive religious and cultural practice through which humans embody knowledge of their cultural past in performance, reflect and build their subjectivity, and map alternative ontologies. To this effect, a significant component of the course will consist in engaging and discussing ethnographic materials related to possession on the way to establish how these contemporary descriptions of possession phenomena might help guiding our historical imagination of the past and construe an effective and productive hermeneutics of it. No specific linguistic knowledge is required. Offered jointly with the Divinity School as HDS 1558.

This course is a study in the relations between majorities and minorities in modern Europe, using the Jews as a focus. It will examine the ways in which the equal status of a minority is negotiated through cultural and political interaction, both subtle and blunt. It will further focus on the role that such negotiations have in the formation of identities of both the majority and the minority. Finally, it will examine the ways in which majorities can exercise control over minorities rendering them conditionally rather than fully equal participants in the national projects of the age.

A close reading of the parent’s sacrifice of the first-born child-- lies at the heart of Western religion and culture. The Biblical narrative in Genesis 22, known as the Binding of Isaac, is one of the most famous and problematic tales in the Bible. The same narrative is foundational to Christian-ity. Later Jewish tradition has interpreted the Biblical text in countless ways from the ancient period down to the present day. The narrative figures prominently in Islam from the Qur’an on. And the Biblical story has been criticized and critiqued since the Middle Ages as a barbaric narrative. Recent works have blamed it for the ubiquity of child abuse in Western society, and it has become a ubiquitous motif of anti-war and protest poetry all over the world. This course will use the interpretive career and literary history of Genesis 22 as a lens through which to study the place of this foundational narrative in Western culture. Readings will include Biblical texts, Euripides’ Iphigenia in Aulis, Philo of Alexandria, ancient Jewish sources, the New Testament, St. Augustine and other Christian exegetes, the Qur’an and later Islamic traditions, Kierkegaard’s Fear and Trembling, Martin Buber, Kafka, Bob Dylan, Yehuda Amichai, and Leonard Cohen, among many other modern writers and poets.

HIST 1008  THE STATE OF ISRAEL IN COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE
Class Number: 18165 Course ID: 203044
Spring 2019
Eyal Naveh
TTh 3:00pm-4:15pm

This course addresses controversies surrounding the history of Zionism and the state of Israel. Central to these controversies are questions of comparison. Is Zionism a movement for collective liberation, like national movements of stateless or colonized peoples, or a variety of western colonialism? Does Israeli statecraft operate within a normal geopolitical spectrum, or is it unusually expansionist and aggressive? This course seeks to answer such questions through a broad and deep analysis that spans the 19th and 20th centuries, pays close attention to Israel’s social and cultural history as well as high politics and military affairs, and imbeds modern Israel into multiple global contexts.

SOCIOl 1118  Migration in Israel and Comparative Context
Class Number: 19620 Course ID: 207867
Spring 2019
Tally Amir
W 3:00pm-5:00pm

With about sixty-five million persons forcibly displaced around the world, most nations have had to create or rethink policies on the admission and integration of migrants. This seminar will focus on migration to Israel from a comparative perspective. Israel, originally founded as the land of Jewish refugees, is struggling to determine who constitutes a “forced” migrant and how it might strike a balance between its legal and moral obligations toward such migrants and its other interests. The seminar covers a number of themes in migration policies such as the categorization and definition of a “forced” migrant; judicial review of immigration policy; detention; encampment; urban integration; and the rights of migrants (including education, cultural rights and employment) in a comparative context. Comparisons focus on the US, Australia and the EU. Readings for the course include Court decisions, International Law instruments, Domestic legislation and socio-legal articles, as well as sociological analyses.
